today, Tuesday 16.07.2024

A high-pressure system will generally influence the weather throughout the upcoming days and bring quite warm air masses to the Alps. Only on Tuesday, an Atlantic front, moving eastward over Germany, will brush past us. Consequently, there will be more clouds during the day than usual, and the sun will only appear intermittently. Additionally, a few showers or thunderstorms are expected throughout the day. The temperatures will be pleasant. Following this, the weather should present itself in a more friendly manner, with the sun shining for longer periods. However, over the mountains, some cumulus clouds will repeatedly develop, so isolated heat thunderstorms, occurring in the second half of the day, cannot be entirely ruled out. The temperatures will be quite summery, and it will often be very hot, especially in the sun.
